Patsy Scarry writes in a Connecticut farmhouse. From her windows she watches horses frolicking in a meadow, birds nesting in a tree.

Eloise Wilkin's studio is also in a comfortable farmhouse home, high on a hilltop overlooking one of New York State's beautiful Finger Lakes. Her family includes four children, two dogs, a duck named Angus, and a kitten.

This is my little Teddy Bear.
He is waiting to play with me.

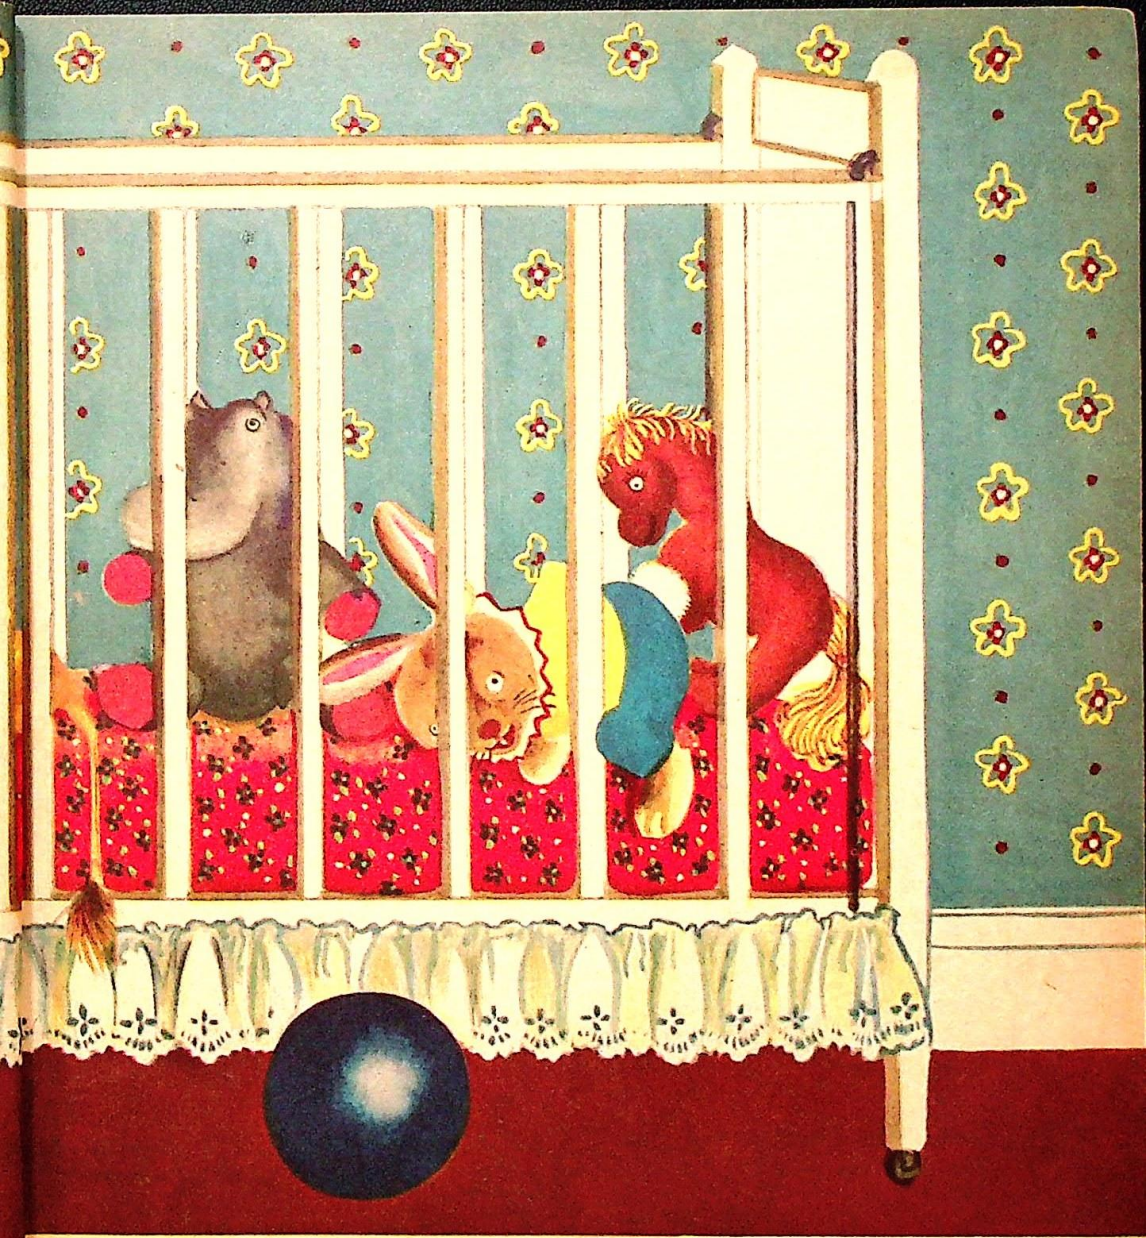
He sits very still while I comb his hair.

Then we run downstairs to breakfast.

Teddy Bear likes a bite of toast. But he can't hold a spoon like me.

By-by, Daddy. Daddy is driving to town to make pennies for Mommy and Teddy and me.

These are Teddy Bear's friends. I put them in my crib. We pretend it is the Zoo.



I feed them peanuts through the bars.
Ouch! Naughty Lion, you mustn't bite!

Look Teddy, the sun is shining. Mommy says we may play out of doors if Teddy will wear his sweater. I will wear mine, too.

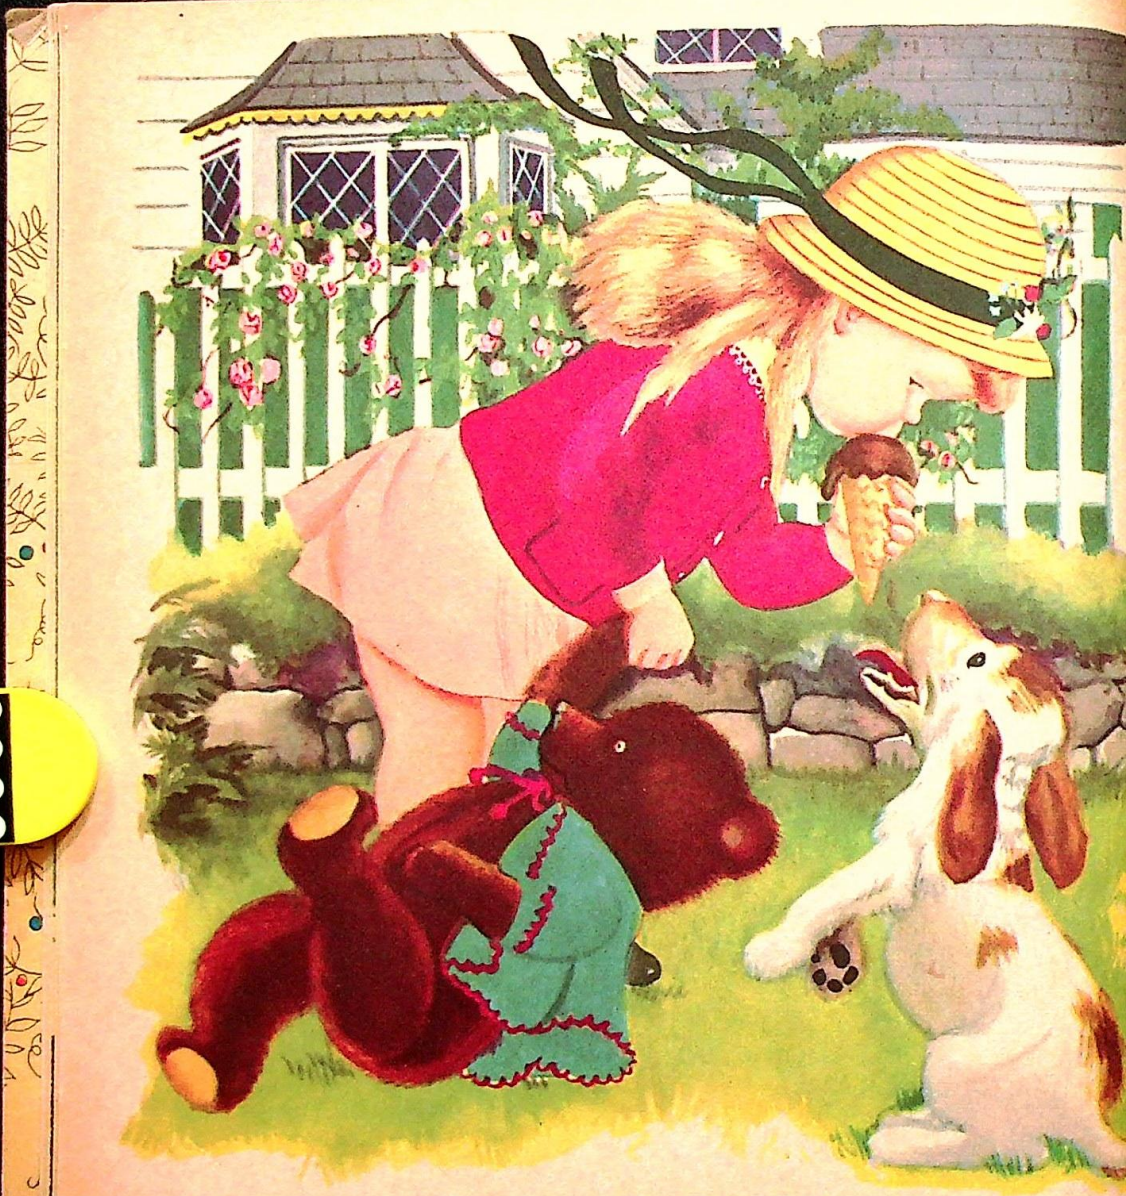
And this is my sand-box. I am making Teddy a sand pie.

When Teddy Bear is very good I take him for a ride in my wagon. We are going to see the new kittens in the barn.

Such fluffy little kittens! They like to play with Teddy.

And this is the fish pond. Oh, poor Teddy Bear! He looked too hard and fell in.

Never mind, Teddy. Here is the ice-cream man. We will share an ice-cream cone. That will make you feel better.

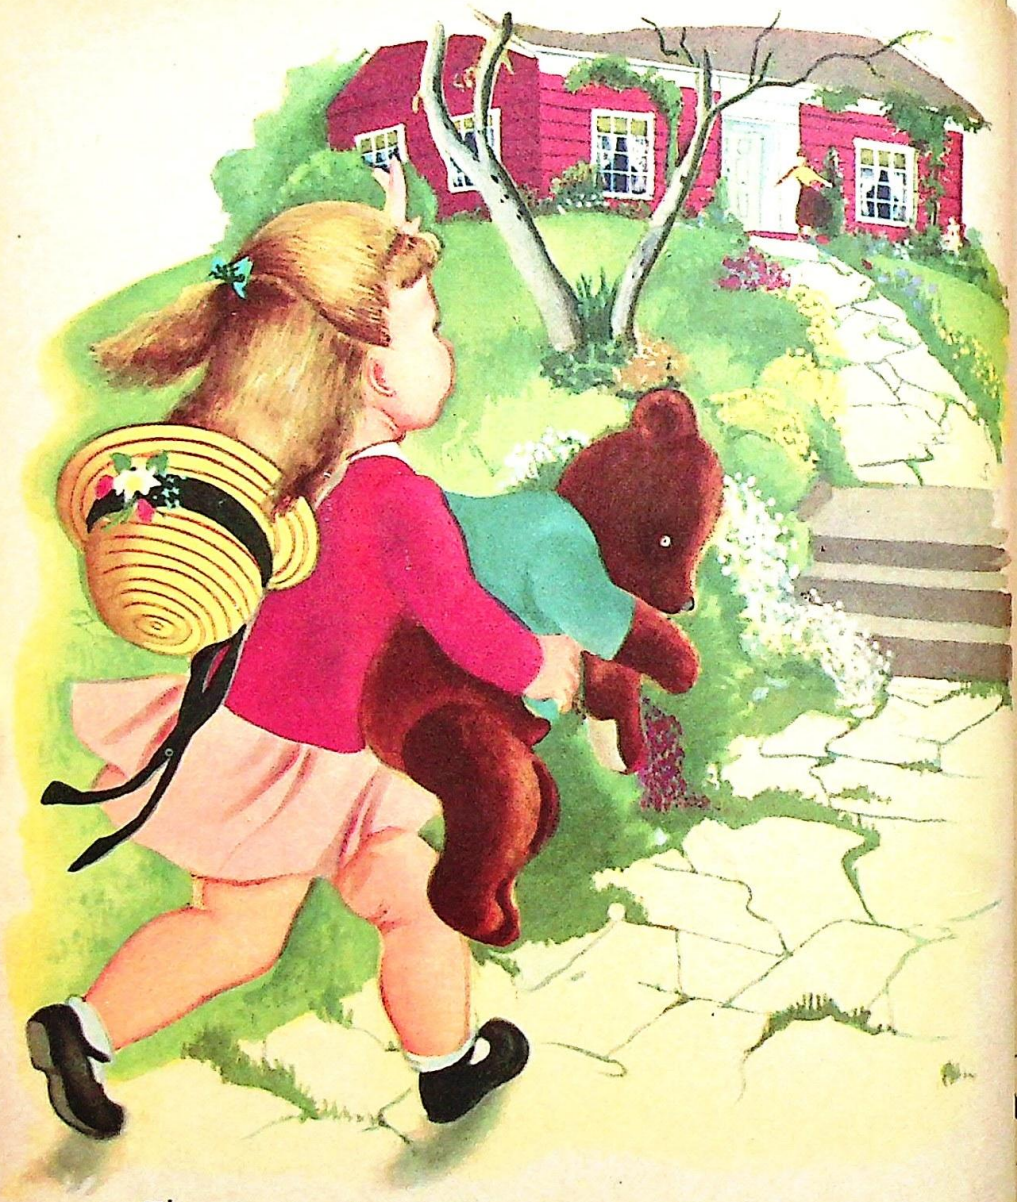


Mmmmm, chocolate ice cream! Have a lick, Teddy Bear. Pal wants some ice cream, too.

Teddy Bear sits with me on my swing. Up up up we swing.

Boom! Poor Teddy! He didn't hold tight.
Don't cry, Teddy. A kiss will make it better.

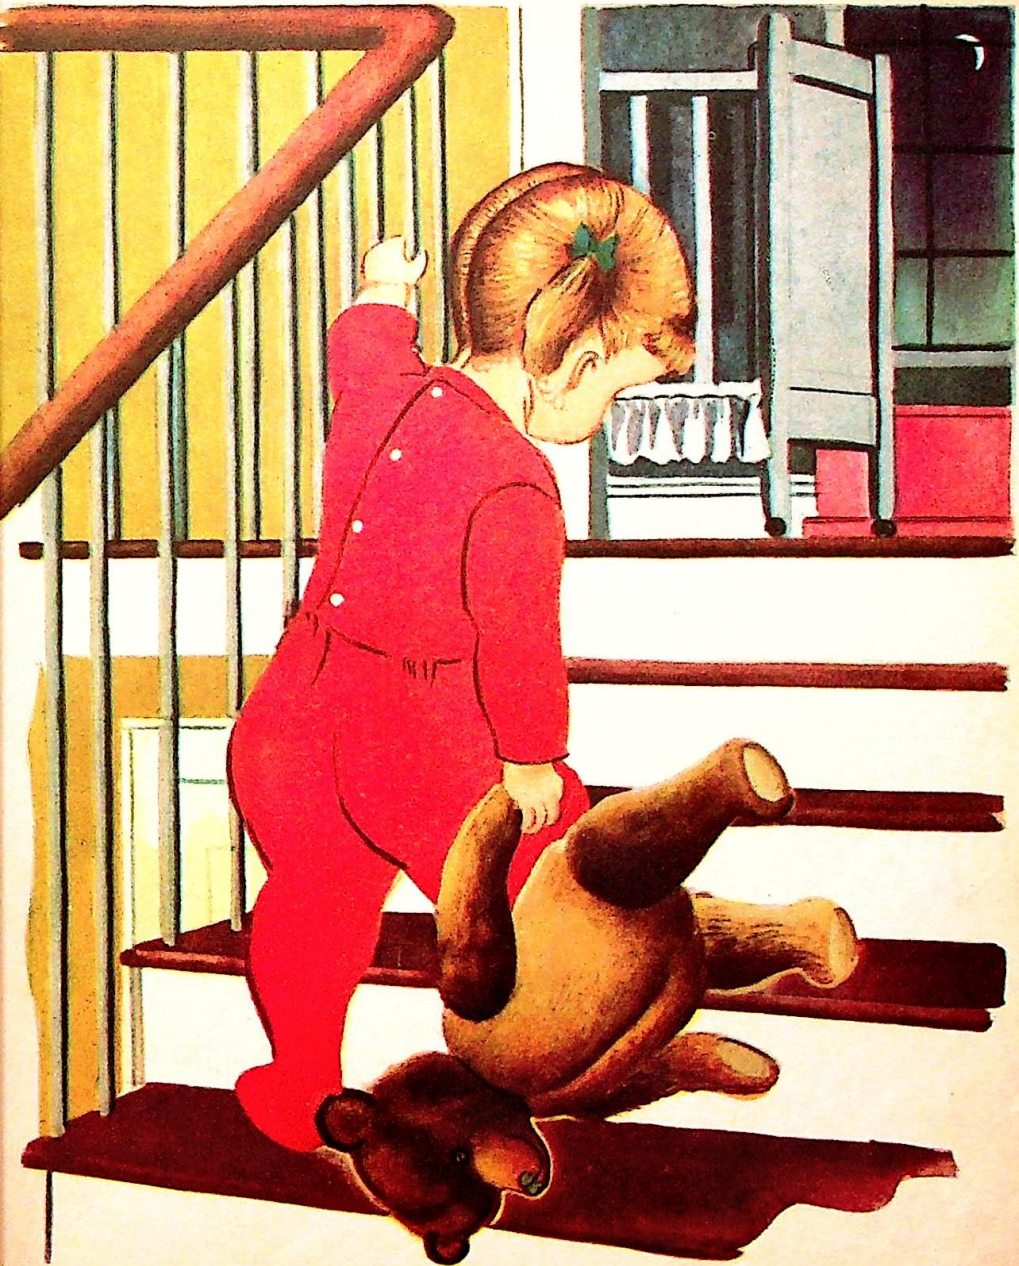
Look, Teddy, the birds are flying home to their nest.



The squirrels are going home to their tree. It's time for us to go home, too. There is Mommy at the door.

Teddy Bear doesn't care for the bath tub.
He would rather sit and watch.

And no amount of scolding will make him eat his supper. What a sleepy Teddy Bear!



Good night, Mommy. Good night, Daddy.

Hug me tight, little Teddy Bear.
Good night. . . . Good night. . . .
Good night. . . .

Good night. . . . . .
